SYNOPSIS:

Bonjour ! Je m'appelle Astro. Mon père est un grand scientifique féru de robotique. Il me gronde souvent pour ma maladresse, je crois que j'ai trop de force. L'autre jour, j'ai utilisé ces étranges pouvoirs surhumains pour extirper des gens d'un gigantesque brasier. C'est là que j'ai découvert que j'étais un robot. C'est à partir de ce jour là que mon père et moi décidâmes de parcourir les océans. Mais là aussi, les dangers sont légion, comme lorsque notre navire s'approcha inexorablement d'un iceberg. D'autres dangers nous guettaient pour mettre à mal notre quête de tranquillité...

Hello les amis! Astroboy est une franchise qu'on kiffe grave. La dernière série de 2003 était très bonne et globalement respectueuse du matériel original. Le film américain, malgré certains défauts, était sympa. Nous venons de voir le teaser du reboot de Astroboy et c'est un choc. Les productions Tezuka nous ont habitué à des adaptations d'assez bonnes qualités comme Black Jack ou encore Pluto de Naoki Urasawa mais ce nouveau design nous a laissé perplexe. Clairement, on sent la volonté de conquérir un public plus jeune. Pourquoi pas mais espérons que la grille de lecture de l'histoire soit tout aussi profonde que l'histoire originale car ça parle en filigrane d'intolérance et de racisme sans manichéisme. Ce reboot est une collaboration franco japonaise de 3 sociétés: Caribara Animation , Shibuya Production et Tezuka Production. Difficile de donner un avis définitif, attendons de voir un premier épisode pour voir notre crainte envolée ou pas. Et vous qu'en pensez vous?

Première bande annonce pour Astro Boy Reboot

La série animée Astro Boy Reboot s'offre un premier trailer haut en couleurs.

Ce nouveau dessin animé mettant en scène le célèbre petit robot inventé par le non moins fameux Osamu TEZUKA est une co-production entre Tezuka Productions au Japon, Caribara Animation en France et Shibuya Productions à Monaco.

Aucune date n'est encore prévue pour cette série de 26 épisodes de 26 minutes, mais on connaît déjà beaucoup de son univers, adapté d'un des classiques de la bande dessinée japonaise. Astro Boy est en effet une série de science-fiction dans laquelle l'humanité construit des robots. L'un d'eux s'appelle Astro ou, en VO, Tetsuwan Atomu : le Puissant Atome. Un nom lourd de sens pour ce héros d'apparence juvénile lorsqu'il apparaît en 1951. Bien que contemporain des optimistes robots d'Isaac ASIMOV, son patronyme rappelle les 6 ans écoulés depuis la fin de la Guerre mais également l'espoir et les craintes portées par la nouvelle technologie nucléaire.

Astro le petit robot est créé par le Docteur Tenma pour remplacer son fils, Tobio, décédé dans un accident de voiture. Voyant que sa créature ne saurait prendre sa place, il l'abandonne. C'est le Professeur Ochanomizu qui prend alors Astro sous son aile et aide ce robot, petit mais costaud, qui se bat pour la justice.

Une des réinterprétations récentes de l'univers créé par TEZUKA pour les aventures de son robot est Pluto. Ce manga de Naoki URASAWA (Monster, 20th Century Boys) reprend un des épisodes d'Astro Boy pour en faire un thriller policier.

Producers aim to breath fresh life into one of Japan's most famous anime franchises

ANNECY – Monaco-based Shibuya Productions, Japan's Tezuka Productions and France's Caribara Animation are launching a brand new animated TV series reboot of "Astro Boy," one of Japan's most famous anime properties.

The project was announced at a Japan cocktail party unspooling Wednesday morning at the Annecy Festival's International Animation Film Market (MIFA).

Action-packed, and made up of 26 half-hour segs, skein will mix 2D and CG animation and target new generation of 8-12-year-old kids who do not know the show.

With Tezuka's owning the "Astro Boy" IP, its producers have the right to create a completely new story, a first, Shibuya Productions founder Cedric Biscay told Variety.

The retread will be set in the present and boast a contemporary design, targeting new generations of kids. It will incorporate new characters and combine "positive things from the past version and new elements," said Biscay.

A first teaser will be made available in September, he added.

A France-Monaco-Japan co-pro structure is logical enough. On Summit Entertainment's 2009 "Astro Boy" animated movie, France was one of the five international territories where the movie, released by SND, grossed over $1 million.

With Yomiuri TV Enterprise, Tezuka Productions is also developing "Little Astro Boy," a short format five-to-seven minute edutainment series aimed at three-to-five year old pre-school tykes.

One of the foundations of Japan's distinctive anime style, and the best-known creation of Tezuka founder Osamu Tezuka, "Astro Boy" was first seen from 1952 as a manga graphic novel. It is set in a futuristic world where robots live alongside humans. It turns on a young robot that fights crime and injustice, including other robots, which he often gives a good hammering.

Adapted as a TV skein in 1960, "Astro Boy" became Japan's first smash-hit animated TV show, being aired on NBC in the U.S. It saw a remake in 1980 and again in 2003, in a retread whose rights are owned by Sony.

Summit Distribution released a 2009 animated feature film, with Charlize Theron, Kristen Bell, Nicholas Cage and Freddie Highmore as "Astro Boy," which was produced by Imagi Animation Studios, Imagi Cristal and Tezuka Productions.

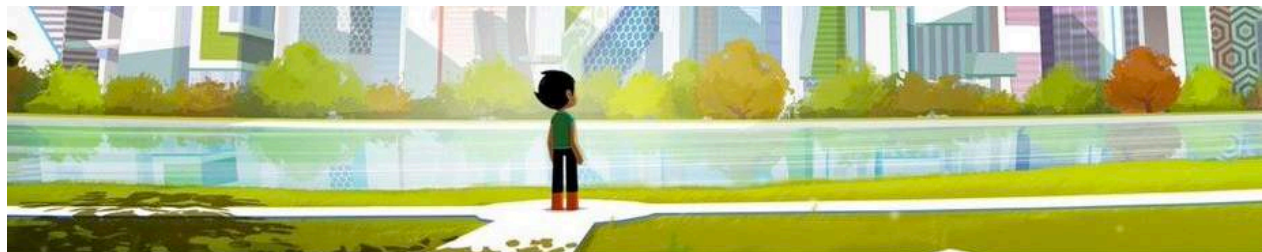

Though the 2009 movie version underwhelmed, grossing $39.9 million worldwide, the new TV series reboot partners point to the franchise's TV track record, where it has aired in over 40 territories. "Astro Boy" merchandizing has spawned some 15,000 items, generating $2.6 billion in revenues, they estimate.

An animation studio that has moved from services into fully-fledged production -taking a credit on Patrice Leconte's "Suicides Club," for example -France's Caribara will both co-produce and provide animation on the series.

TV TEASER: "Astro Boy Reboot"

By Jerry Beck | Animation Scoop
mars 21, 2015 at 2:48PM

A teaser trailer for the upcoming French cartoon Astro Boy Reboot made its debut today at the convention MAGIC in Monaco. Astro Boy Reboot is a co-production from Shibuya Productions in Monaco, Caribara Production in France and Tezuka Productions in Japan. Here's the first look - a dazzling combination of CG and traditional hand drawn animation.

Astro Boy was created by Osamu Tezuka as manga in the 1950s, and as a pioneering anime TV series in the early 60s. Twenty-six episodes of Astro Boy Reboot are now in production, targeted at children between eight and twelve years of age. No U.S. Network or distributor has been announced.

Watch: 'Astroboy Reboot' Gets a Teaser

Astro Boy was first the hero of a manga created in 1952 by Osamu Tezuka, but soon became the star of a popular anime series. The character has been through a lot of iterations and re-imaginings, including a CG movie in 2009. Now he is back on television with a series of 26-minute episodes called Astroboy Reboot, and the first teaser is just below.

The original costume of the boy-robot is apparently gone, and everything about this teaser seems to suggest a more modern take on the Astroboy universe.

Astro Boy Reboot Launches Teaser

BY JULES LOW ON MARCH 22, 2015

CARTOONS, ROBOTS, TV, TV NEWS

Announced back in June 2014, with the very first image from Astro Boy Reboot released late last year as well, the upcoming reboot of the beloved robotic boy wonder has finally released its first teaser. Created as a co-production between Tezuka Productions in Japan, the Monaco-based Shibuya Productions, and Caribara Prouduction in France, the upcoming series will have 26 episodes, each clocking at around 26-minutes, aimed at an audience between eight and twelve. The original manga was written and illustrated by Osamu Tezuka from 1952 to 1968, the series following the eponymous Astro Boy (originally known as Mighty Atom in Japan) and his adventures in a futuristic vision of the world in the 21st Century, where robots and humans coexist.

The legacy of Tezuka and the series still stands tall to this day, with there being several TV adaptations in the 60s, 80s, and 2003, as well as the 2009 feature film. Astro Boy himself was even inducted into the Robotics Hall of Fame in 2004. It will be interesting to see where this reboot goes, whether it will be an entirely new endeavour or if it will adapt both the lighter and darker elements of Tezuka's original story. Currently there's no US adaptation or distributor announced, however I hope that the new generation of children throughout the world will get to experience the wide-eyed enthusiasm and heroics of Astro Boy. The beautiful art style, subtle yet effective music, and sense of wonder the teaser portrays all have me very excited to see this new re-imagining of one of my favourite characters from my childhood.

FIRST TEASER TRAILER RELEASED FOR THE UPCOMING "ASTRO BOY" REBOOT

There's something you absolutely need to see before the day is done and it's the very first teaser trailer for the upcoming "Astro Boy" Anime reboot. The official website for the new series has today been updated to include said teaser trailer and, without giving too much away, I must say that it is looking to be something wonderfully magical.

This new series marks the coming together of three international studios; Tezuka Productions (Japan), Caribara Animation (France), and Shibuya Animation (Monaco), all for one purpose and that's to create a brand-new "Astro Boy" Anime series for this generation to enjoy.

The reboot will feature a new story that, while very much like the original "Astro Boy", will be filled with things we've yet to see "Mighty Atom" do or experience. Despite being directed at young boys and girls between the ages of eight and twelve, I can see how this new series will, once again, capture the hearts and minds of the older fans of the

I, for one, am excited to see what this triforce of animation studios can do with the like of "Astro Boy" and, if this teaser is anything to judge by, it looks like what they're doing is something beautiful. Check it out for yourself:

Astro Boy dates back to the 1950s, beginning as a manga series before spawning one of the formative TV adaptations of the anime genre.

As a Pinocchio-style adventure about a superpowered robot, Astro Boy struck a chord with generations of children. The 1980s anime still has a lot of fans, but recent attempts to revive the franchise were less successful. Fortunately, this new 26-episode animated series looks a lot better than the the CGI movie that flopped in 2009.

This teaser clip arrived online on Saturday, courtesy of French studio Caribara Animation. Caribara is relaunching Astro Boy with Tezuka Productions, the studio founded by Astro Boy creator Osamu Tezuka. The art style is a mix of 2D animation and CGI, and has an appropriately retro-futuristic aesthetic for a story about a robot kid that was originally written in the 1950s.

This hand-drawn style feels like a good choice for Astro Boy, much in the same way that Disney has never successfully rolled out a modern 3D-animated Mickey Whereas this is what the ill-fated computer animated movie looked like in 2009.

Last month we heard about another *Astro Boy* movie coming from a U.S. production company, Animal Logic. Their producer described a live-action superhero franchise modeled on Iron Man, which sounded pretty bizarre given the overabundance of existing superhero franchises plus Hollywood's poor track record with live-action anime adaptations.

Caribara's 2D-animated series looks like a more appropriate interpretation of the old Astro Boy. Although who knows, maybe Hollywood is finally ready for live-action version as well.

The official website for the French, Monacan, and Japanese Astro Boy reboot project began streaming a teaser video on Saturday. The same video debuted at the convention MAGIC in Monaco.

Japan's Tezuka Productions, France's Caribara Animation, and Monaco's Shibuya Productions are collaborating on the series using both 2D and CG techniques. The show's planned 26 episodes will target children from eight to twelve years of age, and Shibuya Productions founder Cedric Biscay notes that the producers have the right to create a brand new story, as Tezuka Productions owns the intellectual property to the franchise.

Tezuka Productions and YTV are also developing a separate Little Astro Boy series of five-to-seven minute “edutainment” shorts. These shorts are targeted at three- to five-year-old children.

This is not the first time that Osamu Tezuka’s 1952-1968 manga inspired overseas works. Hong Kong animation studio IMAGI produced the computer-animated film version of Astro Boy with distributor Summit Entertainment in 2009. A joint production between Tezuka Productions and Nigerian television station Chanel TV created a television animation project (pictured left) earlier this year. Back in Japan, the manga inspired the country’s first full-fledged half-hour television anime series in 1963, followed by a color television series in 1980 and a remake in 2003.

A short teaser trailer for Astro Boy Reboot has been released.

The footage shows Astro soaring through the sky. I feel that the video has a distinctly European feel to its visual aesthetic.

This newest animated adaptation of Astro Boy is a co-production between France's Caribara Production, Monaco's Shibuya Productions, and Japan's Tezuka Productions. It's scheduled for 26 episodes and aimed at children between the ages of 8 and 12. No release date information is currently available.

Osamu Tezuka's Tetsuwan Atom manga, known as Astro Boy internationally, began in 1952. It was adapted into one of the earliest anime TV series and ran from 1963 – 1966 on Fuji TV. Later adaptations followed in 1980 – 1981 on Nippon TV, and again in 2003 – 2004 on Fuji TV. The most recent animated adaptation prior to Astro Boy Reboot was a 2005 theatrical film co-produced by Tezuka Productions and Hong Kong's Imagi Animation Studios.

Melihat video teaser yang diunggah melalui akun YouTube Caribara Animation sejak Sabtu (21/3/2015) itu, menampilkan wajah baru Astro Boy yang terlihat seperti anak remaja usia 13-15 tahun. Terlihat juga keindahan kota dan alam yang menjadi lokasi animasi ini.

Kita bisa melihat Astro Boy yang mengenakan pakaian berwarna hijau itu bisa terbang berkat kaki robotiknya setelah melakukan anjang-jancang di pinggir danau. Ia pun lalu melakukan manuver di sekeliling gedung-gedung pencakar langit.
